SPRING

Once again the most beautiful season of the year, Spring, the time of freedom from the dull season of King Winter, is here. Spring has been with us for only a short period but many things point at the fact that she is here until she in turn must give way to the rule of summer.

Dainty flowers are nodding their heads in the faint breezes and smiling neat the warm care-ess of King Sol. Pussy-cat-tails have been out for several weeks in their new gowns of silver grey. The fragrant lamb-tongue are in bloom, the red-bell buds are ready to burst and add their sweet odor to the spring air. Green buds are covering the once dormant branches of the willow, alder and oaks.

The farmers are busy with their plowing and the cultivation of the fields to help the growth of the sturdy little blades of grain that are pushing through the ground. As they follow the round of the plow they whistle a tune which rises and blends with the song of the housewife as she digs and fusses with the bulbs and flowers of her garden.

The school children have the baseballs out practicing for the famous game which with the coming of spring is among the first thoughts in the minds of all outdoor lovers.

After these true heralds, who can doubt that spring is here?
